1

- Take one A4 coloured sheet of card or paper and fold it in half. This means that you will be able to cut out 2 flower shapes at the same time! It makes the job very handy when you do this!!

2

- With my pencil, I drew a large “U” shape. Then I drew some vertical lines with my ruler to about half way or the middle of my “U” shape. Each line is about 1 cm apart.

3

- I cut along these lines with a scissors. It looked like a fringe when I was finished! Because I folded my card I was able to make 2 flowers at the same time.

4

- Repeat all this process again using a different colour card this time!

5

Now for the fun bit:

- Using a pencil, curl each strip from the top to where the strip ends, half way down the flower. This is like making a ringlet as you roll the paper strip tightly around the pencil.
- Once you reach the end of the strip, remove the pencil. You have made a paper curl! Repeat this across all the strips of the flower until you have made lots of curly paper strips. Do the same pencil curling technique on all your flowers.

6

- I drew some circles on the remaining card with my pencil and cut them out with the scissors. The circles varied in size and some were a little larger or smaller than others.

- I arranged the circles above my flowers as you can see. These circles will become the stigma of my flowers.

7

- Then I glued all the flowers and circles onto the white background sheet.

8

- I drew some leaves onto green card and cut them out with a scissors.

9

- Using a black marker, I drew in the stem, some sepals and stamen.

10

- Finally, I drew some grass onto green paper or card using a black marker and cut it out with a scissors. I glued it onto the base of my picture to make a grassy foreground.
- I finished my artwork by gluing on my green leaves onto the flower stem.

11

- And now to reveal my finished masterpiece! I loved how the curly petals make my flowers almost 3-dimensional!
